“RULE FOR A DAY” RECORD RELEASE OCTOBER 26 AT FINE LINE MUSIC CAFE

The Lost Wheels’ first full-length record, “Rule For a Day,” fuses old-school American blues with up-tempo Australian pub rock, with hints of funk and a heavy dose of slide guitar. The record is fronted by Australia-native Dan Warner, and features local Minnetonkan Walt Kruhoffer on lead guitar, as well as New Yorker Brian Rubin on drums, and Chaska sons Evan Clark on bass and keyboards, and Daniel J. Scott on bass guitar.

In September 2012, the Lost Wheels independently released their debut EP, “Chipper,” with producer Mike Marston. By that fall, the band had earned rave reviews in the Star Tribune, had songs played on WCCO Radio and KFAI FM, made their TV debut on TPT-2 Twin Cities Public Television, had a residency at the historic Gluek’s in downtown Minneapolis, and played several successful shows at the Fine Line Music Café.

With the success of “Chipper,” the Lost Wheels then set their sights on creating a full-length record. They started raising money with the help of backers on Kickstarter, and by January 2013, the band was recording in The Brewhouse studio in Minneapolis, again with Marston at the controls.

Shortly after recording was complete, Evan was called away from the band, and the Lost Wheels recruited yet another longtime friend and Chaska son, Andrew Frederick, a talented multi-instrumentalist, to take over on keyboards. With this lineup set, the Lost Wheels are continuing the drive ahead, and preparing to rock the house during their record release party at the Fine Line on October 26, 2013.

Release Date: October 26, 2013
